

A key goal of the Outline Development Plan for the Greater Bay Area (GBA) is to upgrade the region’s manufacturing sector. This involves adopting more advanced technologies, developing more high-end manufacturing capabilities, and creating a systematic network for industries with advanced technologies. Ultimately, the aim is for advanced technology manufacturing to become a pillar industry of the GBA.

To obtain a face-to-face experience of the GBA development, the Chamber’s China Committee is organizing a mission to Zhongshan and Jiangmen, to study their manufacturing capabilities, and see how businesses in these two cities are transforming their production processes into “smart” and “advanced” manufacturing.

Zhongshan is a base for advanced manufacturing and modern service industries. The city aims to create a world-class advanced manufacturing base as part of the GBA development.

Traditional industries such as food production must transform themselves if they are to benefit from the GBA development. The food sector is one of the key industries in Jiangmen, and the city is making efforts to upgrade this and other traditional industries.

The delegation will travel to and from the Mainland via the Hong Kong-Zhuhai-Macao Bridge.
